HORACE ELWELL AGE 81 IS DEAD

One of Wealthiest Farmers in Rush
County Expires at His Home
Half Mile East of Raleigh.

PROMINENT IN POLITICS

Elected County Commissioner in 1876 and Served in State Legislature in 1877.

Horace H. Elwell, 81 years old, a well known and highly respected resident of the county, died last night, at eleven-thirty o'clock at his home, one-half mile east of Raleigh. Mr. Elwell had been in poor health for some time, and while his death was expected by the immediate family, it came as a surprise to his many friends. Death was due to senility and a complication of diseases.

Mr. Elwell for many years was active in public life, both in county and state. He served one term as county commissioner from the northern district and was later elected to the state legislature. Mr. Elwell was an aggressive Republican and in 1870 was elected to the county office. In the fall of 1876 he was elected to the state legislature and served in the session of 1877.

In all his business affairs Mr. Elwell proved himself capable. Besides farming he raised stock on an extensive scale. In late years he had not been actively engaged in business although he managed many things. He was president of the Cambridge City bank in 1876.

He was married October 15, 1857 to Mary J. Powell, of Fayette county. Mrs. Elwell has been dead many years. Mr. Elwell received his education in the common schools of the county, which at that time were conducted in log school houses. While rather eccentric in late years Mr. Elwell was highly respected and was known as a charitable man. He was a member of the Raleigh Christian church.

Mr. Elwell is survived by four children, Charles Elwell, Mrs. Frank Martin, Mrs. Amos Glidden, and Mrs. Charles Grey. He is also survived by one sister, Mrs. Clay Miller. The funeral services will be conducted Monday morning at eleven o'clock in the Raleigh Christian church and burial will take place in the cemetery there.

NEARING MEXICO CITY.

Washington, Jan. 2.—Carranza troops marching west from Vera Cruz are at Aban only sixty miles from Mexico City, according to a wireless dispatch to the Constitutionalists agency today. It added that large numbers of rebels are doggedly resisting the advance of General Obregon.

LIST OF DEAD OFFICERS.

(By United Press.)

London, Jan. 2.—The admiralty today issued a list of thirty-five officers of the lost battleship Formidable who, it says, must be presumed to have perished. Heading the list is the name of Captain Loxley.

German Statement Says French
Falsified About Steinback Victory.

(By United Press.)

Berlin, Jan. 2.—The direct allegation that the French official report of victories at Steinbach, the Alsacian village which dominates the highway to Altkirch and Mulhausen, are utterly without foundation, was made by the German war office today. All of the French attacks at this point have been repulsed, the German officials claim.

VETERAN C. H. & D. FLAGMAN EXPIRES

William J. Baldwin, Age 64 Years,
Dies Suddenly at His Home
Friday Evening

EMPLOYED AT MAIN STREET

William Baldwin, 64 years old, for eleven years flagman at the Main street crossing of the C. H. & D. railroad, died suddenly last night at six-thirty o'clock from heart disease at his home, 321 East Eighth street. Mr. Baldwin had just reached his home from his day's work and had handed his wife a package of fruit that had been given him by friends, when he was overcome. He died before medical aid could reach him.

Mr. Baldwin was a native of Broughton, England, and had been in this country for twenty-four years. He had been in the employ of the C. H. & D. railway for twenty years and had been on duty at the Main street here continuously for eleven years. He is survived by his widow and one son, Charles.

The funeral services will be held at the late residence tomorrow afternoon at two o'clock, conducted by the Rev. A. D. Batchelor of St. Paul's M. E. church and burial will take place in East Hill cemetery.

WILL SELL FARM RENTAL AT AUCTION

"Dusty" Miller Announces His Place
Will be Rented to Highest Bidder at "Sale" Monday.

IT IS A NOVEL ENTERPRISE

Clen (Dusty) Miller, the well known auctioneer, believes in newspaper advertising and also in his own ability. He has so much faith in the latter that Monday he will conduct a novel sale at the Martin Kelley blacksmith shop in South Main street. At ten o'clock Monday morning Dusty will sell at public auction the rental of his farm for one year. The farm will be rented to the highest bidder for one year with a privilege of three years. The farm contains seventy acres and is located close to Rushville.

Dusty is advertising the sale which as far as known is the only one of its kind ever held here. Renters for farms are numerous but renting them by public auction is a new one, but will no doubt prove successful.

BANK ROBBED TODAY.

NEW OFFICIALS IN TOWNSHIPS

Trustees and Assessors Take Office
New Years Day, Making End of
a Six-Year Term

DUE TO A CHANGE IN THE LAW

During Terms of Retiring Trustees
$218,000 Was Expended for
New School Buildings

After a term of six years in office, eleven township trustees in Rush county stepped down yesterday, and eleven new trustees took office for a term of four years. In respect to the twelfth trustee, James V. Young, of Rushville township, there was no change, because he held the office a part of the last term, having been appointed to fill a vacancy, and was re-elected November 3 last.

The last term of the township trustees was for six years because the 1911 legislature changed the time for the election of trustees to the "off" year—that is to say the year when no president was elected. This was done by the legislature because in presidential year there are so many offices to vote for that it was thought best to elect the trustees in the "off" year so that more attention could be paid to the qualifications of the candidates. The retiring trustees were elected in 1908 and their terms were extended to January 1, 1915, with the proviso they could not be re-elected.

The new trustees are divided equally as to politics, six Democrats and six Republicans. The new township assessors also took office yesterday. Seven of them are Democrats and five of them Republicans. The new township advisory boards took office just as soon as they qualified directly after election. A majority of these officials are Republicans.

The new Republican trustees and assessors are as follows: Anderson, Frank McCorkle, trustee; James W. Campbell, assessor; Noble Ernest R. Tittsworth, trustee; W. H. McDonald, assessor; Ripley, Jesse Henley, trustee; Enos B. Hill, assessor; Richland, Edwin Farthing, trustee; Jackson, Joseph Stevens, trustee; James Gatewood, assessor; Rushville, James V. Young, trustee; Earl Priest, assessor.

The trustees who rounded out their terms yesterday were: Walker, Jesse Shelton; Union, Will Martin; Center, Chester D. Rhodes; Rushville, J. V. Young, who filled out the unexpired term of Ed Crosby, resigned; Posey, N. R. Farlow, Ripley, Jesse Henley, who filled out the unexpired term of A. O. Hill, resigned; Noble, Edgar Morris; Anderson, J. D. Kinnett; Jackson, O. M. Siler; Richland, J. W. Anderson; Orange, Charles Owen; Washington, O. A. J. Hall.

The retiring township assessors were: Anderson, James M. Thomas; Center, Darwin Herkless; Jackson, Joseph A. Stevens; Noble, W. H. McDonald (re-elected); Orange, Claude Miller; Posey, Rolla W. Alexander; Richland, E. A. Farthing; Ripley, Harvey T. White; Rushville, Continued on Page 2.

ELECTION TAKES PLACE TUESDAY

J. Q. Thomas is Candidate For Position on State Board of Agriculture From This District.

HE HAS A FEW OPPONENTS

Goes Before Association With Excellent Qualifications and Endorsement of Fair Associations.

J. Q. Thomas of this city will stand for election to membership on the state board of agriculture from this district at the annual meeting of the board in Indianapolis next Tuesday. The annual meeting is always held the first Tuesday after the first Monday of January each year. The board members are elected by the votes of one delegate from each of the horticultural and agricultural associations of the state.

Mr. Thomas was the first active candidate for the position from this district, but since he entered the race, one or two other men have sprung up in opposition so that there is likely to be a race.

Mr. Thomas sees the time for the election drawing near with the confidence that he has the backing of the Rush County Fair association and other interested persons. He has the unsolicited endorsement of the 247 members of the association in the form of a resolution adopted October 9, 1914.

Mr. Thomas has excellent qualifications for the place. He has been associated with the State Fair association for a number of years in a capacity of trust and has many friends among the horticultural and agricultural association members of the state. Mr. Thomas has been in close touch with the Rush County Fair association, having served as its secretary for a long period of years some time ago. He was elected secretary again and held that office last year. He was re-elected for this year.

The endorsement of the Rush County Fair Association follows: We take pleasure in recommending and endorsing our fellow citizen, Hon. John Q. Thomas, for membership on the State Board of Agriculture for the Third District, to be elected at the annual meeting of the Board, held in the city of Indianapolis on the fifth day of January 1915.

Mr. Thomas is possessed with the necessary qualifications for a useful member of the Board. He has been closely associated with Fair work since early manhood and for many years official connected with this Association, and at this time its Secretary. He has had ample opportunity for observation and information in the many years of his employment at our State fairs. He is well informed in agriculture and stock raising, being a successful farmer. He is a graduate of both classical and law colleges—a practical business man and an affable and courteous gentleman. He is in every way worthy of your confidence and support.

Rush is among the leading agricultural and stock producing counties of the State. It has just held its Fifth-eighth annual Fair. It has never been honored by having a member on the State Board.

MILROY LOST.

The Joy and Gloom team of Indianapolis defeated the Milroy Eureka last night at Milroy by the score of 38 to 16. The Indianapolis team completely outclassed the Milroy team and won an easy victory. The Joy and Gloom team is one of the fastest in the state.

PATIENCE WAS EXHAUSTED

This Was Given Today as Cause For Protest to English.

(By United Press.)

Washington, Jan. 2.—"Exhausted patience" of this government with Great Britain hastened the presentation of the note protesting against the interference with American shipping. The president's forbearance recalled reached the breaking point. Reluctant, he felt compelled by England's inaction and former shipping protest to forward the note. This, according to excellent official sources, today was the actual situation as seen from an administration viewpoint.

Crawford Fairbanks, Political Partner of Tom Taggart, Comments on Terre Haute Indictments.

BUT HE'S NOT IN POLITICS

(By United Press.)

Terre Haute, Ind., Jan. 2.—Crawford Fairbanks, long known as the political partner of Thomas Taggart, declared today that he was "on the scrap heap" as far as politics went. "I'm out of politics. I have been out for over a year. If you really knew how little I knew about politics you wouldn't be here," he said to the reporter. Fairbanks declined to discuss Mayor Roberts and the federal court indictment of 114 Terre Haute men.

"Do you think these Terre Haute men were properly indicted?" he was asked.

"Yes, if they were guilty, but they shouldn't have got all Democrats. Let them indict a few Republicans," he said.

TAFT CANDID ABOUT THE PHILIPPINES

Former President Tells Senate Committee Today That Japanese
Does Not Want Islands.

SAYS WE SHOULD HOLD THEM

(By United Press.)

Washington, Jan. 2.—Former President Taft candidly told the senate Philippines commission that the Japanese do not want the Philippines and that one or two generations ought to pass before the Filipino becomes independent.

"I don't care for the power of the United States in the Philippines," he said. "I would like for this country to get out of the Islands so far as this country alone is concerned. But I am thinking about the poor people of the Islands. They are not fit for self government."

"If the naval base on the Islands was strongly fortified I think that any of the European nations now at war would regard it as an element of strength rather than weakness."

"The only power to which the Islands generally considered desirable. I mean Japan, does not care for the Islands at all, I think."

George Legg, who has been ill at his home near Raleigh for the past several days, was in a critical condition today and death was expected.

"Mystery" of Why Germans Did Not Go on to Paris Explained by William Philip Simms

RETREAT WAS ONLY A BLIND

Strategy Enabled Allies to Come Out
Victorious in so-Called Battle
of Marne

(Note: The following is the first of a series of stories by William Philip Simms, manager of the Paris bureau of the United Press. The series embodies material gathered by Simms on his recent tour of the battlefield with the group of foreign Military attaches especially invited by the French government. Simms was the only American newspaperman who was accredited for the trip.)

BY WILLIAM PHILIP SIMMS
(U. P. Staff Correspondent.)

With the French Army at the Front, Nov. 25 (By Mail to New York)—After talking with officers here who took part in the fighting and who have since made an exhaustive study of the situation, I am now able to throw additional light on the "mystery of August," that period of the war leading up to the battle of the Marne and about which practically nothing thus far has been made public.

The official communique during August were short and contained no details. All that the world knew was that fierce fighting was in progress; that the French and English armies were in retreat; that Paris was in gloom with most of her lights out, her population fleeing southward and the government preparing to move to Bordeaux. Just what was going on at the front the public did not know. Rumor had it towards the first of September that the Germans were in the Paris suburbs, and the exodus was increased, railway stations were packed and many people with first class tickets were glad to find plank seats in freight cars bound for the South.

At this precise moment, without the public knowing it, the tide had turned; the Germans had abandoned Paris as their objective; General Jof-

A Good Habit; Form It

Advertising accurately reflects the sentiment and progress of every community. It is observable that those who closely follow the trend of advertising are the best informed in multitudines of matters closely associated with our every day lives.

The man or woman who reads advertising profits.

The young person who reads advertising unconsciously acquires an education.

Most young people are drawn to advertising because of some pronounced personal interest.

But whatever the motive the habit is an excellent one to indulge in freely.

Good advertising is always interesting; it is always a source of profit to the reader whether the reader buys soon after or a considerable time after.

Advertisement reading lays a good solid foundation because it supplies knowledge and information.

A mighty good habit to cultivate.

HOME ECONOMICS TO PLAY BIG PART

Purdue Short Course Will Pay Some Attention to This Department Because of its Importance.

CONSIDERED TIMELY TOPIC

(Written for United Press.)

The Home Economics Department at Purdue University is giving an interesting and at the same time a very valuable line of instruction that has to do with textile fabrics. The large sum of money which women spend annually for clothing and for household furnishings, such as carpets, bedding and table linen, suggests that any instruction is timely and valuable when it gives a knowledge of adulterations that are now as common in textiles as adulterations were formerly in foods. Those who attend the Farmers' Short Course, January 11th to 15th, 1915, will appreciate the opportunity of inspecting the collection of fabrics and learning about fibres, styles of weaving, the use of dyes, how to test for adulterations and other points that are helpful in training the judgement in selecting and buying textile fabrics. And quite as important are the lines of instruction that trains the taste in selection of color and lines which is illustrated by the style and fit of a garment and the shape and color of a hat.

PRECAUTIONS TO PREVENT DISEASE

Purdue Dean Urges Farmers Not to Attend Short Course if They Have Been in Infected Area.

FOOT-AND-MOUTH DISEASE

Farmers here have received a warning from J. H. Skinner, dean of the extension department of Purdue university, urging them to use care so as not to spread the foot-and-mouth disease, which has been epidemic among live stock in Indiana, at the Purdue short course. The warning follows:

In order to avoid the possibility of spreading foot-and-mouth disease, farmers living on infected farms or located in the immediate neighborhood of same are requested to post pone visiting the University and attending the Farmer's Short Course, Breeders' meetings and Corn Show, etc., until another year.

While the situation is very hopeful in Indiana at present, there is still the possibility of this disease being carried from infected districts to other points.

Your co-operation in the above matter will be appreciated.

A. S. Armstrong; Union, Clarence G. Carr; Walker Leroy Carr; Washington, Francis M. Gordon (re-elected.)

In 1908 there were seven Republican and five Democratic assessors elected, but during the term the assessor of Union township resigned and Clarence G. Carr, a Democrat, was appointed, so that when the assessors retired, they were equally divided politically.

There was some discussion after the election whether or not assessors were ineligible to re-election under the same statute which prevented the re-election of trustees, because they had already served a term of six years and the law says they shall not serve more than four years in any eight years. It is said that it was urged by some men that the election of the two assessors re-elected, after having served for six years, be contested but nothing was ever done.

There was some question, it was said, as to whether filling out unexpired terms to which they had been appointed would effect the eligibility of trustees to re-election. This applied in the case of James V. Young of Rushville township and Jesse Henley of Ripley township, both of whom were re-elected and who had completed the term ending the last day of December. But the state supreme court has held that the years put in a trustee's office on an unexpired term shall not be counted as any part of the four in eight years specified in the statute.

The terms of six years have been rather stormy ones for some of the trustees because their duties have been heavy. New school buildings have been erected in nine of the twelve townships in the county, some of the townships constructing more than one building. 13 buildings in all have been erected, representing a total cost of approximately $218,000. The most costly building constructed by a township trustee during the six years was the one at Milroy, which cost $37,000. These estimates, of course, do not include the school buildings in Rushville city.

The following school houses were erected at the following approximate cost: Ripley, district school building, $3,000; Posey, graded building at Arlington, $20,000; Walker, graded building at Homer, $20,000, and graded building now under course of construction at Manilla which will cost when completed $30,000; Orange, graded building at Moscow, $26,000; Anderson, graded building at Milroy, $27,000; Center, two room building at Mays, $7,000, and graded building at Center, $12,000; Union, graded building at Gings, $12,000, and one at Glenwood, $14,000; Noble, graded school at New Salem, $26,000; Richland, two single-room buildings at cost of $11,000.

With two exceptions, A. L. Gary was attorney for the trustees when the buildings were erected. Will M. Sparks acted as attorney when the Manilla building was being arranged for and Douglas Morris was attorney for Walker township trustee when the Homer building was constructed.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is a sign you have been eating too much meat, which forms uric acid.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and laggard. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

Look years younger! Use the old-time Sage Tea and Sulphur and nobody will know.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost overnight if you'll get a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old, famous Sage Tea Recipe are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray, becoming faded, dry, scraggly and thin have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful—all dandruff goes, scalp itching and falling hair stops.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

Cease Wishing!

Roberts' Attitude.
"You're a — of a Democrat coming down here and arresting all these Democrats."
The Newcastle Courier reports these are the words Donn M. Roberts mayor of Terre Haute and erstwhile candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor, used when Mark Storen, United States marshal, himself a part of the state machine in which Donn Roberts is a "living link" began making wholesale arrests in Terre Haute on indictments returned by the federal grand jury in the investigation of the last election in Terre Haute.
Although it is not the intention of this newspaper to lay at the door of the Democratic party the alleged crimes against the voters of Terre Haute, it is apparent from the comment of a portion of the Democratic press of Indiana that it is intent of the machine to throw dust in the eyes of the people and get all of the "back-fire" possible out of the investigation.
Although it may be true that some of the men caught in the federal net may lay claim to being Republicans or Progressives, the fact still remains that the alleged misconduct at Terre Haute was within the Democratic organization there and was a sin of the Democratic party in that locality. But, of course, it does not follow, of necessity, that because such a condition as has been uncovered by charges preferred at Terre Haute, that the same conditions exist in every Democratic organization in Indiana.

But it may be said without contradiction that much of the fault for the Terre Haute rottenness may be traced to the doors of the Democratic machine in Indiana, off which Donn M. Roberts has lived. The machine and what it has brought about at Terre Haute is responsible for the attitude which Donn Roberts takes of the situation as it now is. He was horrified to think that a good Democrat, one of the boys he had known in the trenches, would arrest him—Donn M. Roberts—for any offense however great or small.
It is well, too, that a Democratic appointee was United States district attorney and in charge of the grand jury which returned the indictments. There can be no charge of politics lodged by the Democrats. Some Democratic newspapers have "pointed with pride" to the fact that it was a Democratic district attorney and a Democratic United States marshal who turned the trick. It appears, from the charges which have been made, that there was nothing else for them to do.
"There is no twilight zone between right and wrong—not even in the Indiana Legislature" said Republican State Chairman Will H. Hays, in an address to the Republican members of the next legislature. This remark of the Republican leader was cheered to the echo by the assembled solons.

The Republican forward movement is making great headway in Fulton county. The Fulton county Republican club, which is now in process of organization, expects to give a big banquet and love feast in Rochester on Lincoln's birthday.
"The Republican party in Hendricks county is stronger and in a more healthy condition than ever before in its history," said Republican County chairman Charles E. Edwards of Danville, on occasion of a recent visit to Republican state headquarters.

ATTACK DIRECTED TOWARD HUNGARY

Grand Duke Nicholas is Carrying Out Long Cherished Plan. According to New Developments.

ADVANCE IN FOUR COLUMNS

Vienna, Jan. 2.—There is no doubt that the main Russian attack is being directed against Hungary instead of Germany or western Galicia. Official dispatches from the front say the Russians in enormous force have driven their way through the passes of the Carpathians, advancing in four columns. The vanguard of the invaders is the crack Eighth Russian corps and behind it is declared to be first-line Russian troops apparently withdrawn from the Polish front.
There is much nervousness both here and Budapest at the news although the military authorities say that everything possible is being undertaken to stop the drive. This represents Grand Duke Nicholas' long cherished plan for a real invasion of Hungary.

The teachers of center township presented C. D. Rhodes, who retired as trustee Friday, with a handsome Morris chair.

What the Solons Are Doing; Legislative Facts---By Expert

Prepared for the United Press by John A. Lapp, director of the Bureau of Legislative Information.
(Mr. Lapp will answer questions relating to the work of the Legislature, including legislative organization and methods, pending bills and enacted laws. Questions on the merits of men or measures will not be answered. To avoid delay address all questions direct to the United Press, 36½ West Washington St., Indianapolis. Questions may be sent to the Daily Republican if preferred.)

Conners writes: "How is the State Legislature organized at the beginning of each session? How much time does it take."
Reply: The legislature meets on Thursday, January 7th. The lieutenant governor is the presiding officer in the senate and calls the senate to order. If he is absent the Auditor of State performs that duty. Upon convening the senate elects a principal secretary, assistant secretary and doorkeeper. The party caucuses the preceding night, select their candidates, and also their floor leaders. A committee usually selects the other employees.
The house of representatives is called to order by the secretary of state and a speaker is elected. The party caucuses the preceding night select their candidates and the election is usually merely a ratification of the majority candidate. The body elects a principal clerk, assistant clerk and doorkeeper. A committee usually selects the other employees. The speaker appoints the committees in the house and the lieutenant governor in the senate.

Organization is usually completed the first day and committees are usually appointed and ready for work on the Monday following.

Citizen writes: "Does the fact that the legislative session is limited to sixty-one days work to prevent deadlocks in choice of officers, or would it be better to allow the legislature unlimited time?"
Reply: There has not been any delay in recent years in organizing the legislature. A speaker has been elected for many years on the first day. Probably the limitation of the session hurries organization work.

Second Annual Auction Sale

Of Hampshire Sows to be Held at J. E. Robbins' (Sal Tone) Stock Farm, Greensburg, On.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY SIXTH

Champion Stock Will be Offered at This Auction as Well as the Get From National Winners—Herd For Sale Represents Years of Scientific Breeding.

J. E. Robbins, proprietor of Sal Tone Stock Farm, will hold his second annual Hampshire sow sale, at his place, situated about one mile south of Greensburg, on Wednesday, January 6th. Of the several head that will be offered at this sale, each individual is of fine pedigree, and their ancestry and breeding potency and their three generations accurately listed. For three years Mr. Robbins has spared neither time nor money to secure a herd of sows and boar which in their pedigree, would show every animal to be either a very prominent winner in the show ring or a most excellent quality and size breeder in a producing way.
Many of the sows in this annual sale of Hampshires have as their sire, Longfellow 3191, the boar which Mr. Robbins purchased at a cost of $1,000, at International Live Stock Show. His get was considered the best five sows from one litter that has ever appeared in a show ring or upon a breeding farm. Before these animals were a year old they averaged 425 pounds per head.
A number of the animals entered in this sale are sired by that grand boar, Lookout 7499, which cost Mr. Robbins the sum of $750, and which the owner considers very cheap at that figure. Lookout has grown more than any other hog in possession of the Sal Tone Stock Farm owner. He is being prepared to head Mr. Robbins' herd at the World's Fair at San Francisco. At such time he is expected to weigh 1,200 pounds. A son of this great boar was junior champion and one of the most talked of boars at the Illinois State Fair, 1914.
The owner of the Sal Tone Stock Farm in preparation for this great sale, has worked earnestly and incessantly to collect a herd that in point of breeding and excellence has no equal. The line to be offered is the best of breeding and one which in years has never met a defeat in any show ring. Many splendid animals will be put under the hammer at this sale, January 6th, at the Sal Tone Stock Farm, south of Greensburg, Ind.

DIVORCE ACT NOT CONSTITUTIONAL

Claim is Set up in Case Brought in Tippecanoe County That 1913 State Law is Unconstitutional.

STATUTE WILL BE TESTED

Whether, or not the act of 1913, requiring divorce suits to be on file sixty days before coming to trial is constitutional, is a question that has been put to Judge Henry H. Vinton, of the Tippecanoe superior court in the case of Grace Webb vs. Thomas Webb. Charles V. McAdams, former member of the state railroad commission, attorney for the plaintiff, has asked the court to hear evidence in the case without waiting the required sixty days.
McAdams has filed a brief in which he sets out that the act of 1913 is unconstitutional. He says the original divorce act of 1873 requiring divorce suits to be filed at one term of court and tried the next, providing they were filed ten days prior to the first day of the trial term, was repealed by implication. In 1881 the civil code was revised so as to permit suits to be filed and tried the same term. Divorce cases, however, were excepted. In 1883 the act of 1881 was amended to include divorce cases. This, the attorney avers, repealed the act of 1873, by implication.
The act of 1913 attempted to amend the act of 1873, which did not exist at that time since it was repealed by implication in 1883. This is the first time the point has been raised in the superior court.

The Trey
O'Hearts

For all that, he wasted no time whatever in obeying Alan's suggestion—then lay for upward of ten minutes with his face in the mold of the tunnel while Alan chewed and spat and chewed and spat and chewed again at the ropes round the wrists of his friend.

If it were in truth no more than ten minutes it seemed upward of an hour before the bonds grew slack and Barcus with an effort that cost him much of the skin on one wrist worried a hand free, then loosed the other, removed and spat out his gag, and set hastily about freeing his friend. That took but a few instants—little more than was needed to rid Rose of her bonds.

That much accomplished, a pause of profound consternation followed. The darkness was absolute in the tunnel, Jimmy having taken the candle away with him; and its silence was rendered uncanny by the sobs and murmurs of the lovers, that sounded somehow fearfully remote and inhuman to Barcus—who had turned immediately to the bulkhead and was, without the slightest hope, groping about its joints and crevices in search of some way of forcing it.

"Barcus—old man!"
"Yes?"
"Have you any idea—"

"Devil a one!"
A pause
"Did you notice what that black-guard had fixed up?"

"What do you mean?"
"Why—at the bottom of the shaft—I got only a glimpse coming in—the door of the powder room was open, and I saw a fuse set to the top of a keg of blasting powder"

"What's the good of that?" We're fast enough as it is!"

"Simply to make assurance doubly sure by causing a cave-in . . ."

"I seem to remember hearing or reading, some place, that tunnels have two ends. If that's true, the far end of this ought to be about the safest place when that explosion happens—if it ever does."

"Something in that!"

"Got any matches?" Barcus inquired, as Alan hurriedly helped Rose to her feet.

"Never one."

"Nor I. We'll have to feel our way along. Let me lead. If I step over the brink of a pit or anything, I'll try to yell and warn you in time."

Alan caught his friend's hand in passing and pressed it warmly—a caress eloquent of his gratitude to Barcus for taking their peril lightly, or pretending to, for the sake of Rose.

A ticklish business, that—groping their way through blackness so opaque that it seemed as palpable as a pool of ink. And haste was indicated; they stumbled on with what caution was possible against pitfalls—a gingerly scramble. Then an elbow in the tunnel—sensed rather than felt or seen—cut them off from direct communication with the bulkhead, and at the same time opened up a shaft of daylight, striking down through that pitchy darkness like a column of fine gold.

Cries of joy, amazement, incredulity choking in their throats, they stumbled forward, gained the spot immediately below the shaft, looked upward, dazzled, to see blue sky like a coin of heaven's minting far above them, at the end of a long and almost perpendicular tunnel, wide enough to permit the passage of a man's body, and lined with wooden ladders.

The end of the lowermost ladder hung within easy reach from the floor of the tunnel.

But even as Alan lifted his hands to grasp the bottom rung the opening at the top of the shaft was temporarily obscured.

Thrilled with apprehension, he hesitated: Marrophat was up there, he little doubted; hardly like that one to overlook the ladder-shaft in preparing the tunnel to be a living tomb.

"What is it?" Rose demanded at his elbow, in a shaken whisper.

"Nothing," he lied instantly, and

seizing the bottom rung, swung himself up. "But wait for me till I signal the coast's clear," he warned before committing himself finally to the ascent.

Marrophat or no Marrophat at the top, there was nothing for him to do but to grasp the nettle danger with a steady hand, unflinching. Even though he were shot dead on emerging from the shaft, it were better than to die down there, like a rat in a trap. . . .

He had climbed not more than half a dozen rungs when a voice hailed from above:

"Law—Oh, Mister Law. I say—don't come up—here's a present for you."

Pausing without answer, he looked up. A few drops of water splattered his face, like heavy rain. Almost immediately the blue sky was permanently eclipsed: a heavy cascade of water, almost a solid column, shot down the shaft with terrific force.

Half-drowned and wholly dazed, he felt himself picked up and dragged away from the waterfall.

Then, as his senses cleared, he comprehended the fact that the tunnel was already filling; that where they stood it was already ankle deep; while the water continued to fall without hint of letup.

CHAPTER XLVI.

Flood and Fire.

Screaming to make himself heard above the roar of the deluge, Barcus yammered in Alan's ear:

"That devil! He's found the reservoir—opened the sluiceways—turned it into that shaft! We're done for!" Alan had no argument with which to gainsay him. Silently getting on his feet, silently he groped for Rose in the darkness, momentarily becoming more dense as the fall of water shut out the light, and drew her away with him, up the slight incline that led back to the bulkhead.

The hour that followed lived ever in his memory as an hour in hell. No ray of hope lightened its impenetrable blackness. He could say nothing to comfort the girl; bravely though she strove to keep up her heart, time and again she shook in his arms like a mad thing, when panic dread caught her by the neck as a terrier catches a rat.

To die there, in the darkness, like so many noxious animals trapped in a well!

The water mounted rapidly. Within five minutes it drove them back to the elbow in the tunnel; within ten it lapped their ankles as they lingered there, doubting which was the greater peril, to advance or to stand fast and let the flooding tide snuff out the fires of life. To return to the neighborhood of the bulkhead was to court the death indicated by the fuse and the keg of blasting powder.

Of a sudden the thought crossed Alan's mind that Marrophat had arranged the latter solely to keep them away from the bulkhead. Now that he thought of it, he felt certain that the powder room had been deliberately disclosed to him by Jimmy.

Probably, then, the keg and fuse were but stage properties—or possibly

Whether or no, was death in one form preferable to the other?

He was decidedly of the opinion that it were better to be extinguished once and for all time, in the space of a second, annihilated by an explosion, than to die thus lingeringly.

On this consideration, he drew Rose with him back to the bulkhead.

When they had been some fifteen minutes beside the bulkhead, the water mounted the head of a slight rise perhaps ten feet behind them, and poured down in ever deeper volume to back up against the barrier.

It was waist deep, however, before they retreated to the head of that rise.

Half an hour later it was waist deep there, on the highest spot in the tunnel.

In fifteen minutes more it had reached their chins. And they stood with head against the roof of the tunnel.

Holding Rose close to him, Alan kissed her lips, that were as cold as death.

Then, fumbling under water, he found the hand of the man at his side.

The water lapped his lips like a blind hand . . .

In the tunnel that branched off from the main shaft, beyond the bulkhead, some thirty minutes before this juncture, a candle had guttered in its stick, left carelessly thrust into the wall by Marrophat's lieutenant, and guttering, had dropped a flaming wick into a little heap of bone-dry debris. This last flamed, licked hungrily at the timbering that upheld the falls of the tunnel. The timbering caught fire without delay. In a space of time incredibly brief the flames were spreading right and left, the tunnel was a vault of blistering fury.

As Alan said his last mute farewell to Rose and Barcus, the fire spread out in the bottom of the shaft and invaded the powder room.

Alan had guessed aright at Marrophat's design: the keg of blasting powder was less than an eighth full; its explosion could not possibly have effected the cave-in Alan had at first feared.

But what Marrophat had overlooked was the proximity to the keg of some several sticks of dynamite, masked by a film of earth that had fallen from the crumbling walls.

When the blazing fuse dropped sparks into the blasting powder this last exploded right willingly and the dynamite took its cue without the least delay.

The resultant detonation was terrific. The bulkhead was crushed in like an eggshell barrier. Part of the walls fell in, but the tunnels and shaft remained intact. The released flood streamed out and spread swiftly to the farthest recesses of the burning tunnel. Dense clouds of steam filled that place of terror as the fires were extinguished.

Swept with the stream as it poured out of the tunnel, Alan contrived throughout to retain his hold round the waist of Rose. Barcus shot past him unseen in the darkness. It was not until Alan had contrived to catch an unburned timber and stay himself and his almost witless burden beneath the mouth of the shaft that he discovered

Barcus alive, if almost unrecognizable in his mask of mold and soot, battling back toward the shaft against the kneedeep tide.

Half-blinded and stifled as he was by the reek of steam and powder fumes, Alan struggled with himself until his wits were passably clear.

Immediately before him dangled the hoisting bucket and rope.

Surrendering the care of Rose to Barcus, Alan climbed into the bucket and stared upward, examining the walls of the shaft for a way to the top.

There was none other than the most difficult; gaps too great to be bridged by climbing showed in the wooden ladders.

The one feasible route was via the rope. And there was nobody at the top to work the windlass—and Alan hoped there would be nobody to oppose his essay.

He addressed himself to the task without murmuring—lifted himself upon the rope, wound it round one leg, and began that heartbreaking climb.

How he accomplished it he never knew. That it must be accomplished was his one, all-absorbing thought. And somehow, by some almost superhuman effort, it was eventually accomplished.

He arrived at the top of the shaft far too exhausted to show surprise when, falling in half-fainting condition within two feet of the brink, he saw Judith Trine running like mad across the clearing.

But without her aid he would not within hours have been able to work the windlass and lift Rose and Barcus to the surface.

JEFFRE FOOLED THE GERMANS

fre, had outplayed Generals von Kluck and von Bulow and set the stage for the Germans' check and retreat.

It now appears certain that General Joffre deliberately held the Germans into believing his army definitely beaten and the British expeditionary forces completely done for, letting them think all they had to do was to let Paris go for the moment, follow up the French and English and crush them for good and all. Over confident the Germans were caught off their guard, just as Joffre expected they would be and as he is believed to have planned and the so called Battle of the Marne ended in a victory for the Allies and the consequent saving of the capital.

How did Joffre lead up to his victory? By refusing to play the grand stand; by attending to his job regardless of what the public might think.

The French commander in Chief decided to retire the bulk of his force east of Paris to positions south of the Marne and the Ornaia and there prepare his offensive. On the first of September this movement was well under way and, so far as I can gather, it was the rapidity of this movement which fooled the German commanders and led them into the error of believing the French and English armies to all intents routed.

From this supposed definite retreat of the Allies, the Germans commanders took to their cue. They had two alternatives before them; either they would have to pursue the Allies with the bulk of their armies, in the moment neglecting Paris or else let the Allies go and take Paris, a result apparently ardently desired from both military and political points of view. If they chose the first course, they risked envelopment in a country cut by numerous water courses—Marne, Grand Morin, Petit Morin, etc—but if they chose the second such a vast number of troops would be necessary that elsewhere their lines would be so weakened that an offensive by the allies might prove disastrous.

So they chose the first course, since apparently the Allies were practically defeated, determining to pursue them and annihilate both French and English. Thus came to be fought the Battle of the Marne which was not really the Battle of the Marne at all, but of five or six other rivers as well.

The Battle commenced around Sept. 5. The danger of the enveloping movement probably foreseen by the Germans but discounted because they thought the Allies definitely in retreat and incapable of serious fighting, at once became apparent. The French and English pressed in from the west, making a pocket the bottom of which was in the region of Coulommiers, Courtacon and Esternay, and here Generals Foch, d'Esperey and others resuming the offensive, began their smashing blows. The rest of the story is known. The Germans retreated precipitously leaving behind considerable material. The French praise the German commanders for escaping at all. Under less able leaders, the French say, they could not have extricated their armies, so well prepared were the plans of General Joffre.

Among military men, foreign as well as French, General Joffre is regarded as a fox for strategy and utterly free from pose. These two qualities, they say, permit him to plan his movements carefully and without an eye to the bleachers or an ear to public opinion. He fights for France instead of for his own glory.

MINING IS CHIEF BATTLE FEATURE

Veteran German Sappers Succeed in Demolishing French Caissons Near Achicourt.

A NEW YEAR'S EVE ATTACK

(By United Press.)

Paris, Jan. 2.—Mining operations by both sides have featured the operations on the battle-front during the last 36 hours. The Germans, operating with veteran sappers, succeeded in demolishing French caissons in the region between Deaumont and Achicourt. The French managed to demolish a line of German trenches and Parvillers village in the forest of Selle.

It was admitted today that on New Year's eve the Germans attacked in force at numerous points along the battleline, but the war office insists that they were everywhere repulsed. The violent artillery duel continues on the dunes at Neuport and in the region of Arras, Albert and Roye.

HORACE ELWELL AGE 81 IS DEAD

One of Wealthiest Farmers in Rush
County Expires at His Home
Half Mile East of Raleigh.

PROMINENT IN POLITICS

Elected County Commissioner in 1876 and Served in State Legislature in 1877.

Horace H. Elwell, 81 years old, a well known and highly respected resident of the county, died last night, at eleven-thirty o'clock at his home, one-half mile east of Raleigh. Mr. Elwell had been in poor health for some time, and while his death was expected by the immediate family, it came as a surprise to his many friends. Death was due to senility and a complication of diseases.

Mr. Elwell for many years was a county and was born July 30, 1833. He was the fifth of seven children born to the late Eli and Elizabeth Elwell, who were natives of New York state. Horace Elwell was reared on a farm and early in life took up this work and cleared for himself a tract of 188 acres near the Elwell home-stand. To this he gradually added until he became known as one of the wealthiest farmers in Rush county.

Mr. Elwell for many years was active in public life, both in county and state. He served one term as county commissioner from the northern district and was later elected to the state legislature. Mr. Elwell was an aggressive Republican and in 1870 was elected to the county office. In the fall of 1876 he was elected to the state legislature and served in the session of 1877.

In all his business affairs Mr. Elwell proved himself capable. Besides farming he raised stock on an extensive scale. In late years he had not been actively engaged in business although he managed many things. He was president of the Cambridge City bank in 1876.

He was married October 15, 1867 to Mary J. Powell, of Fayette county. Mrs. Elwell has been dead many years. Mr. Elwell received his education in the common schools of the county, which at that time were conducted in log school houses. While rather eccentric in late years Mr. Elwell was highly respected and was known as a charitable man. He was a member of the Raleigh Christian church.

Mr. Elwell is survived by four children, Charles Elwell, Mrs. Frank Martin, Mrs. Amos Gidden, and Mrs. Charles Grey. He is also survived by one sister, Mrs. Clay Miller. The funeral services will be conducted Monday morning at eleven o'clock in the Raleigh Christian church and burial will take place in the cemetery there.

VETERAN C. H. & D. FLAGMAN EXPIRES

William J. Baldwin, Age 64 Years,
Dies Suddenly at His Home
Friday Evening

EMPLOYED AT MAIN STREET

William Baldwin, 64 years old, for eleven years flagman at the Main street crossing of the C. H. & D. railroad, died suddenly last night at six-thirty o'clock from heart disease at his home, 321 East Eighth street. Mr. Baldwin had just reached his home from his day's work and had handed his wife a package of fruit that had been given him by friends, when he was overcome. He died before medical aid could reach him.

Mr. Baldwin was a native of Broughton, England, and had been in this country for twenty-four years. He had been in the employ of the C. H. & D. railway for twenty years and had been on duty at the Main street here continuously for eleven years. He is survived by his widow and one son, Charles.

The funeral services will be held at the late residence tomorrow afternoon at two o'clock, conducted by the Rev. A. D. Batchelor of St. Paul's M. E. church and burial will take place in East Hill cemetery.

WILL SELL FARM RENTAL AT AUCTION

"Dusty" Miller Announces His Place
Will be Rented to Highest Bid-
der at "Sale" Monday.

IT IS A NOVEL ENTERPRISE

Clen (Dusty) Miller, the well known auctioneer, believes in newspaper advertising and also in his own ability. He has so much faith in the latter that Monday he will conduct a novel sale at the Martin Kelley blacksmith shop in South Main street. At ten o'clock Monday morning Dusty will sell at public auction the rental of his farm for one year. The farm will be rented to the highest bidder for one year with a privilege of three years. The farm contains seventy acres and is located close to Rushville.

Dusty is advertising the sale which as far as known is the only one of its kind ever held here. Renters for farms are numerous but renting them by public auction is a new one, but will no doubt prove successful.

NEW OFFICIALS IN TOWNSHIPS

Trustees and Assessors Take Office
New Years Day, Making End of
a Six-Year Term

DUE TO A CHANGE IN THE LAW

During Terms of Retiring Trustees
$218,000 Was Expended for
New School Buildings

After a term of six years in office, eleven township trustees in Rush county stepped down yesterday, and eleven new trustees took office for a term of four years. In respect to the twelfth trustee, James V. Young, of Rushville township, there was no change, because he held the office a part of the last term, having been appointed to fill a vacancy, and was re-elected November 3 last.

The last term of the township trustees was for six years because the 1911 legislature changed the time for the election of trustees to the "off" year—that is to say the year when no president was elected. This was done by the legislature because in presidential year there are so many offices to vote for that it was thought best to elect the trustees in the "off" year so that more attention could be paid to the qualifications of the candidates. The retiring trustees were elected in 1908 and their terms were extended to January 1, 1915, with the proviso they could not be re-elected.

The new trustees are divided equally as to politics, six Democrats and six Republicans. The new township assessors also took office yesterday. Seven of them are Democrats and five of them Republicans. The new township advisory boards took office just as soon as they qualified directly after election. A majority of these officials are Republicans.

The new Democratic trustees and assessors taking office yesterday are as follows: Center, Hershell Gilson, trustee; Sanford Anderson, assessor; Walker, Donald L. Mull, trustee; Jesse Creel, assessor; Union, Homer Nash, trustee; Edgar Wilson, assessor; Washington, Edward V. Jackson, trustee; J. M. ELECTION TAKES PLACE TUESDAY

tion on State Board of Agriculture From This District.

HE HAS A FEW OPPONENTS

Goes Before Association With Excellent Qualifications and Endorsement of Fair Associations.

J. Q. Thomas of this city will stand for election to membership on the state board of agriculture from this district at the annual meeting of the board in Indianapolis next Tuesday. The annual meeting is always held the first Tuesday after the first Monday of January each year. The board members are elected by the votes of one delegate from each of the horticultural and agricultural associations of the state.

Mr. Thomas was the first active candidate for the position from this district, but since he entered the race, one or two other men have sprung up in opposition so that there is likely to be a race.

Mr. Thomas sees the time for the election drawing near with the confidence that he has the backing of the Rush County Fair association and other interested persons. He has the unsolicited endorsement of the 247 members of the association in the form of a resolution adopted October 9, 1914.

Mr. Thomas has excellent qualifications for the place. He has been associated with the State Fair association for a number of years in a capacity of trust and has many friends among the horticultural and agricultural association members of the state. Mr. Thomas has been in close touch with the Rush County Fair association, having served as its secretary for a long period of years some time ago. He was elected secretary again and held that office last year. He was re-elected for this year.

The endorsement of the Rush County Fair Association follows: We take pleasure in recommending and endorsing our fellow citizen, Hon John Q. Thomas, for membership on the State Board of Agriculture for the Third District, to be elected at the annual meeting of the Board, held in the city of Indianapolis on the fifth day of January 1915.

Mr. Thomas is possessed with the necessary qualifications for a useful member of the Board. He has been closely associated with Fair work since early manhood and for many years official connected with this Association, and at this time its Secretary. He has had ample opportunity for observation and information in the many years of his employment at our State fairs. He is well informed in agriculture and stock raising, being a successful farmer. He is a graduate of both classical and law colleges—a practical business man and an affable and courteous gentleman. He is in every way worthy of your confidence and support.

Rush is among the leading agricultural and stock producing counties of the State. It has just held its Fifth-eighth annual Fair. It has never been honored by having a member on the State Board.

MILROY LOST.

The Joy and Gloom team of Indianapolis defeated the Milroy Eureka last night at Milroy by the score of 38 to 16. The Indianapolis team completely outclassed the Milroy team and won an easy victory. The Joy and Gloom team is one of the fastest in the state.

PATIENCE WAS EXHAUSTED

This Was Given Today as Cause For Protest to English.

(By United Press.)

Washington, Jan. 2.—"Exhausted patience" of this government with Great Britain hastened the presentation of the note protesting against the interference with American shipping. The president's forbearance recalled reached the breaking point. Reluctant, he felt compelled by England's inaction and former shipping protest to forward the note. This, according to excellent official sources, today was the actual situation as seen from an administration viewpoint.

on Terre Haute Indictments.

BUT HE'S NOT IN POLITICS

(By United Press.)

Terre Haute, Ind., Jan. 2.—Crawford Fairbanks, long known as the political partner of Thomas Taggart, declared today that he was "on the scrap heap" as far as politics went. "I'm out of politics. I have been out for over a year. If you really knew how little I knew about politics you wouldn't be here," he said to the reporter. Fairbanks declined to discuss Mayor Roberts and the federal court indictment of 114 Terre Haute men.

"Do you think these Terre Haute men were properly indicted?" he was asked.

"Yes, if they were guilty, but they shouldn't have got all Democrats. Let them indict a few Republicans," he said.

TAFT CANDID ABOUT THE PHILIPPINES

Former President Tells Senate Committee Today That Japanese
Does Not Want Islands.

SAYS WE SHOULD HOLD THEM

(By United Press.)

Washington, Jan. 2.—Former President Taft candidly told the senate Philippines commission that the Japanese do not want the Philippines and that one or two generations ought to pass before the Filipino becomes independent.

"I don't care for the power of the United States in the Philippines," he said. "I would like for this country to get out of the Islands so far as this country alone is concerned. But I am thinking about the poor people of the Islands. They are not fit for self government.

"If the naval base on the Islands was strongly fortified I think that any of the European nations now at war would regard it as an element of strength rather than weakness.

"The only power to which the Islands generally considered desirable. I mean Japan, does not care for the Islands at all, I think."

George Legg, who has been ill at his home near Raleigh for the past several days, was in a critical condition today and death was expected.

"Mystery" of Why Germans Did Not

RETREAT WAS ONLY A BLIND

Strategy Enabled Allies to Come Out
Victorious in so-Called Battle
of Marne

(Note: The following is the first of a series of stories by William Philip Simms, manager of the Paris bureau of the United Press. The series embodies material gathered by Simms on his recent tour of the battlefield with the group of foreign Military attaches especially invited by the French government. Simms was the only American newspaperman who was accredited for the trip.)

(U. P. Staff Correspondent.)

With the French Army at the Front, Nov. 25 (By Mail to New York).—After talking with officers here who took part in the fighting and who have since made an exhaustive study of the situation, I am now able to throw additional light on the "mystery of August," that period of the war leading up to the battle of the Marne and about which practically nothing thus far has been made public.

The official communique during August were short and contained no details. All that the world knew was that fierce fighting was in progress; that the French and English armies were in retreat; that Paris was in gloom with most of her lights out, her population fleeing southward and the government preparing to move to Bordeaux. Just what was going on at the front the public did not know. Rumor had it towards the first of September that the Germans were in the Paris suburbs, and the exodus was increased, railway stations were packed and many people with first class tickets were glad to find plank seats in freight cars bound for the South.

At this precise moment, without the public knowing it, the tide had turned; the Germans had abandoned Paris as their objective; General Jof-

A Good Habit; Form It

Advertising accurately reflects the sentiment and progress of every community. It is observable that those who closely follow the trend of advertising are the best informed in multitudes of matters closely associated with our every day lives.

The man or woman who reads advertising profits.

The young person who reads advertising unconsciously acquires an education.

Most young people are drawn to advertising because of some pronounced personal interest.

But whatever the motive the habit is an excellent one to indulge in freely.

Good advertising is always interesting; it is always a source of profit to the reader whether the reader buys soon after or a considerable time after.

Advertisement reading lays a good solid foundation because it supplies knowledge and information.

A mighty good habit to cultivate.

HOME ECONOMICS TO PLAY BIG PART

Purdue Short Course Will Pay Some Attention to This Department Because of its Importance.

CONSIDERED TIMELY TOPIC

(Written for United Press.)
The Home Economics Department at Purdue University is giving an interesting and at the same time a very valuable line of instruction that has to do with textile fabrics. The large sum of money which women spend annually for clothing and for household furnishings, such as carpets, bedding and table linen, suggests that any instruction is timely and valuable when it gives a knowledge of adulterations that are now as common in textiles as adulterations were formerly in foods. Those who attend the Farmers' Short Course, January 11th to 15th, 1915, will appreciate the opportunity of inspecting the collection of fabrics and learning about fibres, styles of weaving, the use of dyes, how to test for adulterations and other points that are helpful in training the judgement in selecting and buying textile fabrics. And quite as important are the lines of instruction that train the taste in selection of color and lines which is illustrated by the style and fit of a garment and the shape and color of a hat.

PRECAUTIONS TO PREVENT DISEASE

Purdue Dean Urges Farmers Not to Attend Short Course if They Have Been in Infected Area.

Farmers here have received a warning from J. H. Skinner, dean of the extension department of Purdue university, urging them to use care so as not to spread the foot-and-mouth disease, which has been epidemic among live stock in Indiana, at the Purdue short course. The warning follows:

In order to avoid the possibility of spreading foot-and-mouth disease, farmers living on infected farms or located in the immediate neighborhood of same are requested to postpone visiting the University and attending the Farmer's Short Course, Breeders' meetings and Corn Show, etc., until another year.

While the situation is very hopeful in Indiana at present, there is still the possibility of this disease being carried from infected districts to other points.

Your co-operation in the above matter will be appreciated.

A. S. Armstrong; Union, Clarence G. Carr; Walker Leroy Carr; Washington, Francis M. Gordon (re-elected.)

In 1908 there were seven Republican and five Democratic assessors elected, but during the term the assessor of Union township resigned and Clarence G. Carr, a Democrat, was appointed, so that when the assessors retired, they were equally divided politically.

There was some discussion after the election whether or not assessors were ineligible to re-election under the same statute which prevented the re-election of trustees, because they had already served a term of six years and the law says they shall not serve more than four years in any eight years. It is said that it was urged by some men that the election of the two assessors re-elected, after having served for six years, be contested but nothing was ever done.

There was some question, it was said, as to whether filling out unexpired terms to which they had been appointed would effect the eligibility of trustees to re-election. This applied in the case of James V. Young of Rushville township and Jesse Henley of Ripley township, both of whom were re-elected and who had completed the term ending the last day of December. But the state supreme court has held that the years put in a trustee's office on an unexpired term shall not be counted as any part of the four in eight years specified in the statute.

The terms of six years have been rather stormy ones for some of the trustees because their duties have been heavy. New school buildings have been erected in nine of the townships in the county, some of the townships constructing more than one building. 13 buildings in all have been erected, representing a total cost of approximately $215,000. The most costly building constructed by a township trustee during the six years was the one at Milroy, which cost $37,000. These estimates, of course, do not include the school buildings in Rushville city.

The following school houses were erected at the following approximate cost: Ripley, district school building, $3,000; Posey, graded building at Arlington, $20,000; Walker, graded building at Homer, $20,000, and graded building now under course of construction at Maulla which will cost when completed $30,000; Orange, graded building at Moscow, $20,000; Anderson, graded building at Milroy, $27,000; Center, two room building at Mays, $7,000, and graded building at Center, $12,000; Union, graded building at Gings, $12,000, and one at Glenwood, $14,000; Noble, graded school at New Salem, $26,000; Richland, two single-room buildings at cost of $11,000.

With two exceptions, A. L. Gary was attorney for the trustees when the buildings were erected. Will M. Sparks acted as attorney when the Manilla building was being arranged for and Douglas Morris was attorney for Walker township trustee when the Homer building was constructed.

Says Backache is a sign you have been eating too much meat, which forms uric acid.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels, removing all the body's uric waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sour, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

Look years younger! Use the old-time Sage Tea and Sulphur and nobody will know.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost overnight if you'll get a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old, famous Sage Tea Recipe are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray, becoming faded, dry, scraggly and thin have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful—all dandruff goes, scalp itching and falling hair stops.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

CLEO MADISON and GEORGE LARKIN in
"THE JAWS OF DEATH, TREY O' HEARTS"

CLEO MADISON, Series No. 13, GEORGE LARKIN

This series is very strong and there is a strong melodramatic situation, where Rose, Alan and Barcus are locked in the chamber of a mine. Incoming water threatens to drown them, but an explosion occurs which releases the water, and the water in turn puts out the fire. Judith has a narrow escape from death on the swinging bridge, which breaks while she is crossing. This episode is crowded with thrilling situations, which makes it the greatest serial ever shown.

Roberts' Attitude.

"You're a — of a Democrat coming down here and arresting all these Democrats."

The Newcastle Courier reports
these are the words of Donn M. Roberts mayor of Terre Haute and erstwhile candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor, used when Mark Storen, United States marshal, himself a part of the state machine in which Donn Roberts is a "living link" began making wholesale arrests in Terre Haute on indictments returned by the federal grand jury in the investigation of the last election in Terre Haute.

Although it is not the intention of this newspaper to lay at the door of the Democratic party the alleged crimes against the voters of Terre Haute, it is apparent from the comment of a portion of the Democratic press of Indiana that it is intent of the machine to throw dust in the eyes of the people and get all of the "back-fire" possible out of the investigation.

Although it may be true that some of the men caught in the federal net
may lay claim to being Republicans or Progressives, the fact still remains that the alleged misconduct at Terre

Haute was within the Democratic organization there and was a sin of the Democratic party in that locality.
But, of course, it does not follow, of necessity, that because such a condition as has been uncovered by charges preferred at Terre Haute, that the same conditions exist in every Democratic organization in Indiana.

But it may be said without contradiction that much of the fault for the Terre Haute rottenness may be traced to the doors of the Democratic machine in Indiana, off which Donn
M. Roberts has lived. The machine and what it has brought about at Terre Haute is responsible for the attitude which Donn Roberts takes of the situation as it now is. He was horrified to think that a good Democrat, one of the boys he had known in the trenches, would arrest him—Donn M. Roberts—for any offense
however great or small.

It is well, too, that a Democratic appointee was United States district attorney and in charge of the grand jury which returned the indictments.
There can be no charge of politics lodged by the Democrats. Some Democratic newspapers have "pointed with pride" to the fact that it was a Democratic district attorney and a Democratic United States marshal who turned the trick. It appears, from the charges which have been made, that there was nothing else for them to do.

"There is no twilight zone between right and wrong—not even in the Indiana Legislature" said Republican State Chairman Will H. Hays, in an address to the Republican members of the next legislature. This remark of the Republican leader was cheered to the echo by the assembled solons.

The Republican forward movement is making great headway in Fulton county. The Fulton county Republican club, which is now in process of organization, expects to give a big banquet and love feast in Rochester on Lincoln's birthday.

"The Republican party in Hendricks county is stronger and in a more healthy condition than ever before in its history," said Republican County chairman Charles E. Edwards of Danville, on occasion of a recent visit to Republican state headquarters.

ATTACK DIRECTED TOWARD HUNGARY

Grand Duke Nicholas is Carrying Out Long Cherished Plan. According to New Developments.

ADVANCE IN FOUR COLUMNS
(By United Press.)

Vienna, Jan. 2.—There is no doubt that the main Russian attack is being directed against Hungary
instead of Germany or western Galicia. Official dispatches from the front say the Russians in enormous force have driven their way through the passes of the Carpathians, advancing in four columns. The vanguard of the invaders is the crack Eighth Russian corps and behind it is declared to be first-line Russian troops apparently withdrawn from the Polish front.

There is much nervousness both here and Budapest at the news although the military authorities say that everything possible is being undertaken to stop the drive. This represents Grand Duke Nicholas' long cherished plan for a real invasion of Hungary.

The teachers of center township presented C. D. Rhodes, who retired as trustee Friday, with a handsome Morris chair.

What the Solons Are Doing; Legislative Facts---By Expert

Prepared for the United Press by John A. Lapp, Director of the Bureau of Legislative Information.

(Mr. Lapp will answer questions relating to the work of the Legislature, including legislative organization and methods, pending bills and enacted laws. Questions on the merits of men or measures will not be answered. To avoid delay address all questions direct to the United Press, 361 West Washington St., Indianapolis.
Questions may be sent to the Daily Republican if preferred.)

Conners writes: "How is the State Legislature organized at the beginning of each session? How much time does it take.

Reply: The legislature meets on Thursday, January 7th. The lieutenant governor is the presiding officer in the senate and calls the senate to order. If he is absent the Auditor of State performs that duty. Upon convening the senate elects a principal secretary, assistant secretary and doorkeeper. The party caucuses the preceding night, select their candidates, and also their floor leaders.
A committee usually selects the other employees.

The house of representatives is called to order by the secretary of state and a speaker is elected. The party caucuses the preceding night select their candidates and the election is usually merely a ratification of the majority candidate. The body elects a principal clerk, assistant clerk and doorkeeper. A committee usually selects the other employees. The speaker appoints the committees in the house and the lieutenant governor in the senate.

Organization is usually completed the first day and committees are usually appointed and ready for work on the Monday following.

Citizen writes: "Does the fact that the legislative session is limited to sixty-one days work to prevent deadlocks in choice of officers, or would it be better to allow the legislature unlimited time?"

Reply: There has not been any delay in recent years in organizing the legislature. A speaker has been elected for many years on the first day. Probably the limitation of the session hurries organization work.

Second Annual Auction Sale

Of Hampshire Sows to be Held at J.
E. Robbins' (Sal Tone) Stock Farm, Greensburg, On.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY SIXTH

Champion Stock Will be Offered at This Auction as Well as the Get
From National Winners—Herd
For Sale Represents Years of Scientific Breeding.

J. E. Robbins, proprietor of Sal Tone Stock Farm, will hold his second annual Hampshire sow sale, at his place, situated about one mile south of Greensburg, on Wednesday, January 6th. Of the several head that will be offered at this sale, each individual is of fine pedigree, and there ancestry and breeding potency and their three generations accurately listed. For three years Mr. Robbins has spared neither time nor money to secure a herd of sows and boar which in their pedigree, would show every animal to be either a very prominent winner in the show ring or a most excellent quality and size breeder in a producing way.

Many of the sows in this annual sale of Hampshires have as their sire, Longfellow 3191, the boar which Mr. Robbins purchased at a cost of $1,000, at International Live Stock Show. His get was considered the best five sows from one litter that has ever appeared in a show ring or upon a breeding farm. Before these animals were a year old they averaged 425 pounds per head.

A number of the animals entered in this sale are sired by that grand boar, Lookout 7499, which cost Mr.
Robbins the sum of $750, and which the owner considers very cheap at that figure. Lookout has grown more than any other hog in possession of the Sal Tone Stock Farm owner. He is being prepared to head Mr. Robbins' herd at the World's Fair at San Francisco. At such time he is expected to weigh 1,200 pounds. A son of this great boar was junior champion and one of the most talked of boars
at the Illinois State Fair, 1914.

The owner of the Sal Tone Stock Farm in preparation for this great sale, has worked earnestly and incessantly to collect a herd that in point of breeding and excellence has no equal. The line to be offered is the best of breeding and one which in years has never met a defeat in any show ring. Many splendid animals will be put under the hammer
at this sale, January 6th, at the Sal Tone Stock Farm, south of Greensburg, Ind.

DIVORCE ACT NOT CONSTITUTIONAL

Claim is Set up in Case Brought in Tippecanoe County That 1913
State Law is Unconstitutional.

STATUTE WILL BE TESTED

Whether, or not the act of 1913,
requiring divorce suits to be on file sixty days before coming to trial is constitutional, is a question that has been put to Judge Henry H. Vinton, of the Tippecanoe superior court in the case of Grace Webb vs. Thomas Webb. Charles V. McAdams, former member of the state railroad commission, attorney for the plaintiff, has asked the court to hear evidence in the case without waiting the required sixty days.

McAdams has filed a brief in which he sets out that the act of 1913 is unconstitutional. He says the original divorce act of 1873 requiring divorce suits to be filed at one term of court and tried the next, providing they were filed ten days prior to the first day of the trial term, was repealed by implication. In 1881 the civil code was revised so as to permit suits to be filed and tried the same term. Divorce cases, however, were excepted. In 1883 the act of 1881 was amended to include divorce cases. This, the attorney avers, repealed the act of 1873, by implication.

The act of 1913 attempted to amend the act of 1873, which did not exist at that time since it was repealed by implication in 1883. This is the first time the point has been raised in the superior court.

The Trey O'Hearts

For all that, he wasted no time whatever in obeying Alan's suggestion—then lay for upward of ten minutes with his face in the mold of the tunnel while Alan chewed and spat and chewed and spat and chewed again at the ropes round the wrists of his friend.

If it were in truth no more than ten minutes it seemed upward of an hour before the bonds grew slack and Barcus with an effort that cost him much of the skin on one wrist worried a hand free, then loosed the other, removed and spat out his gag, and set hastily about freeing his friend. That took but a few instants—little more than was needed to rid Rose of her bonds.

That much accomplished, a pause of profound consternation followed. The darkness was absolute in the tunnel, Jimmy having taken the candle away with him; and its silence was rendered uncanny by the sobs and murmurs of the lovers, that sounded somehow fearfully remote and inhuman to Barcus—who had turned immediately to the bulkhead and was, without the slightest hope, groping about its joints and crevices in search of some way of forcing it.

"Barcus—old man!"
"Yes?"
"Have you any idea—"

"Devil a one!"
A pause
"Did you notice what that black-guard had fixed up?"

"What do you mean?"
"Why—at the bottom of the shaft—I got only a glimpse coming in—the door of the powder room was open, and I saw a fuse set to the top of a keg of blasting powder."

"What's the good of that?" We're fast enough as it is!"

"Simply to make assurance doubly sure by causing a cave-in . . ."

"Something in that!"
"Got any matches?" Barcus inquired, as Alan hurriedly helped Rose to her feet.

"Never one."

"Nor I. We'll have to feel our way along. Let me lead. If I step over the brink of a pit or anything, I'll try to yell and warn you in time."

Alan caught his friend's hand in passing and pressed it warmly—a caress eloquent of his gratitude to Barcus for taking their peril lightly, or pretending to, for the sake of Rose.

A ticklish business, that—groping their way through blackness so opaque that it seemed as palpable as a pool of ink. And haste was indicated; they stumbled on with what caution was possible against pitfalls—a gingerly scramble. Then an elbow in the tunnel—sensed rather than felt or seen—cut them off from direct communication with the bulkhead, and at the same time opened up a shaft of daylight, striking down through that pitchy darkness like a column of fine gold.

Cries of joy, amazement, incredulity choking in their throats, they stumbled forward, gained the spot immediately below the shaft, looked upward, dazzled, to see blue sky like a coin of heaven's minting far above them, at the end of a long and almost perpendicular tunnel, wide enough to permit the passage of a man's body, and lined with wooden ladders.

The end of the lowermost ladder hung within easy reach from the floor of the tunnel.

But even as Alan lifted his hands to grasp the bottom rung the opening at the top of the shaft was temporarily obscured.

Thrilled with apprehension, he hesitated: Marrophat was up there, he little doubted; hardly like that one to overlook the ladder-shaft in preparing the tunnel to be a living tomb.

"What is it?" Rose demanded at his elbow, in a shaken whisper.

"Nothing," he lied instantly, and

seizing the bottom rung, swung himself up. "But wait for me till I signal the coast's clear," he warned before committing himself finally to the ascent.

Marrophat or no Marrophat at the top, there was nothing for him to do but to grasp the nettle danger with a steady hand, unflinching. Even though he were shot dead on emerging from the shaft, it were better than to die down there, like a rat in a trap.

He had climbed not more than half a dozen rungs when a voice hailed from above:

"Law—Oh, Mister Law. I say—don't come up—here's a present for you."

Pausing without answer, he looked up. A few drops of water splattered his face, like heavy rain. Almost immediately the blue sky was permanently eclipsed: a heavy cascade of water, almost a solid column, shot down the shaft with terrific force.

Half-drowned and wholly dazed, he felt himself picked up and dragged away from the waterfall.

Then, as his senses cleared, he comprehended the fact that the tunnel was already filling; that where they stood it was already ankle deep; while the water continued to fall without hint of letup.

CHAPTER XLVI.

Flood and Fire.

Screaming to make himself heard above the roar of the deluge, Barcus yammered in Alan's ear:

"That devil! He's found the reservoir—opened the sluiceways—turned it into that shaft! We're done for!" Alan had no argument with which to gainsay him. Silently getting on his feet, silently he groped for Rose in the darkness, momentarily becoming more dense as the fall of water shut out the light, and drew her away with him, up the slight incline that led back to the bulkhead.

The hour that followed lived ever in his memory as an hour in hell. No ray of hope lightened its impenetrable blackness. He could say nothing to comfort the girl; bravely though she strove to keep up her heart, time and again she shook in his arms like a mad thing, when panic dread caught her by the neck as a terrier catches a rat.

To die there, in the darkness, like so many noxious animals trapped in a well!

The water mounted rapidly. Within five minutes it drove them back to the elbow in the tunnel; within ten it lapped their ankles as they lingered there, doubting which was the greater peril, to advance or to stand fast and let the flooding tide snuff out the fires of life. To return to the neighborhood of the bulkhead was to court the death indicated by the fuse and the keg of blasting powder.

Of a sudden the thought crossed Alan's mind that Marrophat had arranged the latter solely to keep them away from the bulkhead. Now that he thought of it, he felt certain that the powder room had been deliberately disclosed to him by Jimmy.

Probably, then, the keg and fuse were but stage properties—or possibly

Whether or no, was death in one form preferable to the other?

He was decidedly of the opinion that it were better to be extinguished once and for all time, in the space of a second, annihilated by an explosion, than to die thus lingeringly.

On this consideration, he drew Rose with him back to the bulkhead.

When they had been some fifteen minutes beside the bulkhead, the water mounted the head of a slight rise perhaps ten feet behind them, and poured down in ever deeper volume to back up against the barrier.

It was waist deep, however, before they retreated to the head of that rise.

Half an hour later it was waist deep there, on the highest spot in the tunnel.

In fifteen minutes more it had reached their chins. And they stood with head against the roof of the tunnel.

Holding Rose close to him, Alan kissed her lips, that were as cold as death.

Then, fumbling under water, he found the hand of the man at his side.

The water leaped his lips like a blind hand.

In the tunnel that branched off from the main shaft, beyond the bulkhead, some thirty minutes before this juncture, a candle had guttered in its stick, left carelessly thrust into the wall by Marrophat's lieutenant, and guttering, had dropped a flaming wick into a little heap of bone-dry debris. This last flamed, licked hungrily at the timbering that upheld the falls of the tunnel. The timbering caught fire without delay. In a space of time incredibly brief the flames were spreading right and left, the tunnel was a vault of blistering fury.

As Alan said his last mute farewell to Rose and Barcus, the fire spread out in the bottom of the shaft and invaded the powder room.

Alan had guessed aright at Marrophat's design: the keg of blasting powder was less than an eighth full; the explosion could not possibly have effected the cave-in Alan had at first feared.

But what Marrophat had overlooked was the proximity to the keg of some several sticks of dynamite, masked by a film of earth that had fallen from the crumbling walls.

When the blazing fuse dropped sparks into the blasting powder this last exploded right willingly and the dynamite took its cue without the least delay.

The resultant detonation was terrific. The bulkhead was crushed in like an eggshell barrier. Part of the walls fell in, but the tunnels and shaft remained intact. The released flood streamed out and spread swiftly to the farthest recesses of the burning tunnel. Dense clouds of steam filled that place of terror as the fires were extinguished.

Swept with the stream as it poured out of the tunnel, Alan contrived throughout to retain his hold round the waist of Rose. Barcus shot past him unseen in the darkness. It was not until Alan had contrived to catch an unburned timber and stay himself and his almost witless burden beneath the mouth of the shaft that he discovered Barcus alive, if almost unrecognizable in his mask of mold and soot, battling back toward the shaft against the kneedeep tide.

Half-blinded and stifled as he was by the reek of steam and powder fumes, Alan struggled with himself until his wits were passably clear.

Immediately before him dangled the hoisting bucket and rope.

Surrendering the care of Rose to Barcus, Alan climbed into the bucket and stared upward, examining the walls of the shaft for a way to the top.

There was none other than the most difficult; gaps too great to be bridged by climbing showed in the wooden ladders.

The one feasible route was via the rope. And there was nobody at the top to work the windlass—and Alan hoped there would be nobody to oppose his essay.

He addressed himself to the task without murmuring—lifted himself upon the rope, wound it round one leg, and began that heartbreaking climb.

How he accomplished it he never knew. That it must be accomplished was his one, all-absorbing thought. And somehow, by some almost superhuman effort, it was eventually accomplished.

He arrived at the top of the shaft far too exhausted to show surprise when, falling in half-fainting condition within two feet of the brink, he saw Judith Trine running like mad across the clearing.

But without her aid he would not within hours have been able to work the windlass and lift Rose and Barcus to the surface.

fre, had outplayed Generals von Kluck and von Bulow and set the stage for the Germans check and retreat.

It now appears certain that General Joffre deliberately held the Germans into believing his army definitely beaten and the British expeditionary forces completely done for, letting them think all they had to do was to let Paris go for the moment, follow up the French and English and crush them for good and all. Over confident the Germans were caught off their guard, just as Joffre expected they would be and as he is believed to have planned and the so called Battle of the Marne ended in a victory for the Allies and the consequent saving of the capital.

How did Joffre lead up to his victory? By refusing to play the grand stand; by attending to his job regardless of what the public might think.

The French commander in Chief decided to retire the bulk of his force east of Paris to positions south of the Marne and the Ornaia and there prepare his offensive. On the first of September this movement was well under way and, so far as I can gather, it was the rapidity of this movement which fooled the German commanders and led them into the error of believing the French and English armies to all intents routed.

From this supposed definite retreat of the Allies, the Germans commanders took to their cue. They had two alternatives before them; either they would have to pursue the Allies with the bulk of their armies, in the moment neglecting Paris or else let the Allies go and take Paris, a result apparently ardently desired from both military and political points of view. If they chose the first course, they risked envelopment in a country cut by numerous water courses—Marne, Grand Morin, Petit Morin, etc.—but if they chose the second such a vast number of troops would be necessary that elsewhere their lines would be so weakened that an offensive by the allies might prove disastrous.

So they chose the first course, since apparently the Allies were practically defeated, determining to pursue them and annihilate both French and English. Thus came to be fought the Battle of the Marne which was not really the Battle of the Marne at all, but of five or six other rivers as well.

The Battle commenced around Sept. 5. The danger of the enveloping movement probably foreseen by the Germans but discounted because they thought the Allies definitely in retreat and incapable of serious fighting, at once became apparent. The French and English pressed in from the west, making a pocket the bottom of which was in the region of Coulommiers, Courtacon and Esternay, and here Generals Foch, d'Esperay and others resuming the offensive, began their smashing blows. The rest of the story is known. The Germans retreated precipitously leaving behind considerable material. The French praise the German commanders for escaping at all. Under less able leaders, the French say, they could not have extricated their armies, so well prepared were the plans of General Joffre.

Among military men, foreign as well as French, General Joffre is regarded as a fox for strategy and utterly free from pose. These two qualities, they say, permit him to plan his movements carefully and without an eye to the bleachers or an ear to public opinion. He fights for France instead of for his own glory.

He lived for a number of years at the corner of Fifth and Sexton streets.

MINING IS CHIEF BATTLE FEATURE

Veteran German Sappers Succeed in

Demolishing French Caissons

Near Achicourt.

A NEW YEAR'S EVE ATTACK

(By United Press.)

Paris, Jan. 2.—Mining operations by both sides have featured the operations on the battle-front during the last 36 hours. The Germans, operating with veteran sappers, succeeded in demolishing French caissons in the region between Deaumont and Achicourt. The French managed to demolish a line of German trenches and Parvillers village in the forest of Selle.

It was admitted today that on New Year's eve the Germans attacked in force at numerous points along the battleline, but the war office insists that they were everywhere repulsed. The violent artillery duel continues on the dunes at Nieuport and in the region of Arras, Albert and Roye.
